

areas? Older people very much count on their regular delivery as some are unable to drive to town. Could more rural 'group' mailboxes be established so that rural mail delivery may continue? Has deregulation worked well elsewhere? I await your reply.

Lynda Ardief

Sincerely,
Lynda Ardief

ON

Aug 5 2008

Dear advisory panel

I am writing to ask that our public post office not be deregulated & that Canada Post maintain its exclusive privilege to handle addressed letters. As a mail user, I am concerned by deregulation in that American-based companies may take over CANADA Post. I am also very concerned that the review of our public post office does not include public hearings. Canada currently has one of the lowest standard postage rates and our postal services are universal & affordable. Do we lose our postal service in rural