

To Whom It May Concern;

I believe that deregulation and privatization of public services has never helped those services to be more efficient. In my lifetime I have seen many deregulation projects within the United States and Canada, with the only benefit going to the few wealthy people who might own stock in the companies.

The vast majority of the people who use and depend upon Canada Post do not own stock at all, unless it is in the form of retirement savings plans. Making Canada Post unresponsive to the public trust, beholden only to the private interests of a few individuals, will not better serve us.

This decision by Mr. Harper's government, to form a committee and come to a resolution within a few months, while only taking public comments for a few weeks, is not indicative of Conservative principles as I have come to know them. It is indicative of a show march toward fascism, where the Canadian Government is designed for the interests of the wealthy with little or no concern for the rest of the country.
