

Dear Advisory Panel,

I would suggest that Canada Post not be privatized. History shows that many such services that have been privatized have not provided as satisfactory service as when govt. operated.

However, there is need to cut costs in everything. Suggestions: reduce the number of little trucks that are running all over the country, bringing the postie to your driveway (especially when they don't have heavy parcels). For at least a year now, we consistently do not receive mail one day a week (and it's not because there is none). If Canada Post wants to cut back, why not do every second street each day or have delivery Monday Wednesday Friday, instead of having the postie walk down the street and just hit houses hit and miss. There are many ways to reduce costs and still maintain a satisfactory service. Thanks for your consideration.
